Men know More About Technique of the Stage, but Don't Know Each Other As Members of the Other Sex Do and Don't Study the Women

Loyalty to its star member, Mrs. Edith Illis Baker Furness, has always been one of the most salient characteristics of the Century Theatre Club, so it was to be exrected that part of the first meeting of the season, which was held yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor, should be devoted to a discussion of her latest play, The Ranchman."

Every one agreed that it is a screamingly funny play, not a bit coarse and withal subtle, wherever subtlety is needed, with here and there a proper touch of pathos. New York hasn't seen "The Ranchman" yet, and Mrs. E. E. B. Furness, who was ooking as fit as possible in a white three piece suit, black velvet picture hat and the atest coiffure, admitted that she didn't know when it would. Brooklyn has been more fortunate.

'I'm really not a literary person, you know," continued Mrs. Furness. "I know that some of my lines wouldn't mean anything if they weren't accompanied by a lot of stage business. In fact I'm perfectly willing to admit that I never would have been an author at all if I hadn't been a producer. I have had so much to do with the alteration and reconstruction and putting of the finishing teuches on other people's plays that after a while it seemed the easiest thing in the world for me to write one myself." "Of course it was:" assented an admirer

"It's too bad there aren't more women producers." went on Mrs. Furness. "It is sometimes just those little touches which come to a woman through her intuitive powers and which a man would never think of in a thousand years that might be the making of a play. There have been many unnecessary failures—have been many unne many plays which didn't seem to quite get a grip on the public, although from a literary point of view they were excellent. A woman producer might have prevented those plays from being taken off the boards."

"But don't men know more than women about the technique of the stage?" objected the Centurian, who hadn't spoken

"Perhaps they do." assented Mrs. Fur-"I'm not going to say anything unkind about men. Some of them are very intelligent, and when it comes to the question of merely creating splendid theatric effects it is not probable that women could equal them just at present. What I do claim for women, however, is a little finer perception of some of the more delicate points of dramatic art, not be-cause they know more about dramatic art, but because their very manner of life, as distinguished from man's, has made them better psychologists." "Now what do you mean by that?"

asked the recording secretary, pausing with uplifted pen. "Why just this." explained the speaker. "I mean that every woman, or nearly every one, has, or has had, a father, a brother, and a husband, not to speak of sons, and uncles. She has had ample a study those men in all

Men have no such conditions to encounter. They have female relatives, to be sure, but as a rule they are able to dictate to them, and it isn't at all necessary that they should be sensitive to every little change of expression or inflection in the voice. Women, for that reason, know men better than men know women, and the habit of observing men accurately feaches them also to observe their greater masters of peychologic detail than are men, and are therefore valuable in the production of plays that depend for success on little incesses a secretary that the summer of the processions of the cause.

When the application of Cohan & Harris. the theatrical managers, for an injunction against Eugene Walter, the playwright, and David Belasco, came before Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday, counsel for the defendant declared that Cohan & Harris had, through anger and for revenge, refused to produce any of Walter's plays before he scored a success under another management, and at one time threatened to kick him out of happened to make the contract. He said he was on Shelter Island in the summer of 1906, where he was writing a play called "The Undertow." He said that Samuel Harris, one of the plaintiffs, heard the play read there and liked it. Harris agreed to produce it and gave him $250 on account. He said he never got any other money from the firm except $150 that he borrowed from George M. Cohan. Mr. Walter declared that the plaintiffs not only failed to produce this play but not only failed to produce this play but rejected "Paid in Full" and "The Wolf," declaring that they would not be suc-

Counsel for David Belasco argued that Walter wrote "The Easiest Way" before he made his contract with Cohan &

CLERGYMAN VISITS SUFFRAGE OFFICES AND IS PLEASED.

He Takes Away an Armful of Pamphleti and Leaves a Conditional Promise to Speak Up for the Cause-The Headquarters Staff and Mrs. Pankhurst

History is being made at the suffrage eadquarters at 505 Fifth avenue faster than Mrs. Ida Husted Harper can record up there are kept in a continual state of, excitement wondering who will be the next distinguished man to walk in, pledge his support to the cause dear to Mrs Belmont and walk out with his arms full of specimens of the forty-nine varieties of Rights of Woman literature.

Yesterday it was the Rev. Percy Sticknev Grant, who after lunching with Mrs. Belmont unwarily permitted himself to be led over just to take a peep at the leader's special sanctum. It followed as a matter of course that he spent the next our or two paying calls all along the line. not missing Mrs. Harper or Mrs. Ella Hawley Crossett in the state offices, nor yet the Rev. Anna Shaw, who had just come back to her office after a lecture tour through the West.

Mr. Grant said that they were all noble and self sacrificing women and that they deserved all the support they could get He was going to do everything he could for them, he said, even to letting them speak to some of his women parishoners who work in big factories and other places of the sort down on the lower West Side In fact the Rev. Mr. Grant went so far as to say that the condition of these women was deplorable even if they did attend the Ascension Church Chapet, and he thought that suffrage might be a panacea for their troubles. At any rate, the suffrage propaganda couldn't possibly on the occasion of the Hudson-Fulton make their condition any worse and he begged Mrs. Belmont to send down some of her best orators to see what they could

The supply of literature, which is being constantly reenforced by boxes arriving from Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Denver, impressed the clergyman almost as much as did the imposing array of secretaries, stenographers and pages. He insisted that one of the secretaries go through the bundle presented to him three times in order to be sure that not a pamphlet had been omitted.

More than all he promised when he left that if he was not forcibly detained by a wedding over which he had no control he would go to the State suffrage convention at Troy October 20 to 24 and make a tion at Troy October 20 to 24 and make a speech urging women to take measures to get the ballot.

Mrs. Belmont is going to the convention no matter what happens, and she has sworn that nothing but stage fright shall stand in the way of her making that maiden speech for the cause for which all her followers have been clamoring for months. As for Mr. Grant, he didn't say whether his speech at Troy, if he makes it, will be of the suffragette variety.

It may be noted that while Mrs. Mackay has refused to take a box for the Pankhurst mass meeting at Carnegie Hall on

About half of the New York city floats reached Albany, the others seemed to be scattered along the river towns because not adequate provisions had been made to transport them from place to place. To-night there was an elaborate display of fireworks here and a banquet to the official guests of the city at the Hotel Ten Eyck, including Gov. Hughes and staff, Major-Gen. Leonard Wood and staff, Col. Cowles and staff and Stewart L. Woodford, the president of the Hudson-Fulton Commission.

FLOATS REACH' PEEKSKILL. Only 11 Survivors Now, but the Village Had a Fine Celebration.

PEEKSKILL, Oct. 8.—This village had the largest gathering in its history to-day

Teams were sent to Ossining to bring up the floats that had been used in New York, but only eleven of them reached here. The others had to be left at various points along the road because of the many difficulties encountered in the effort to bring them here, railroad bridges and branched trees being some of the obstacles met with.

But despite the absence of so many of the floats the parade was called a big success by the thousands that viewed it. The fire department, the Exempt Firemen's Association, all the local trade unions, Sons of Veterans, battalions of young cadets, the pupils of the public schools and various local organizations were in the line, making a procession, that took an hour to pass a given point.

The grand marshal was Frederick A. Smith and he had as chief of staff J. Coleridge Darrow. The marchers paraded through the principal streets of the village and were reviewed by Mayor Warren of Yonkers, chairman of the Lower Hudson Commission; Public Safety Commissioner Benedict of Yonkers and success by the thousands that viewed it.

THE LATHAM WILL CONTEST. SPANKED WINDOW BREAKER. BAER'S TESTIMONY PUBLISHED Widow of Broker Asks Court to Appoint Temporary Administrator.

The fight over the will of John C. Latham, the Stock Exchange broker who left over $150,000 to his native town of Hopkinsville, Ky., came before Surrogate Cohalan vesterday on the application of the widow, Mrs. Elsie Gaylord Latham, both individually and as guardian for her daughter, for the appointment of a temporary administrator of the estate, which is worth $600,000.

Counsel for the executors named in Mr. Latham's will appeared and said they would not oppose the appointment of a temporary administrator. He said that the estate amounts to $125,000 in stocks and bonds, the Stock Exchange seat valued at $80,000, Cotton Exchange seat valued at $10,000 and the good will of the firm of Latham & Alexander, estimated to be worth $181,000. He said-he understood that now is a good time to sell exchange seats and that the appointment of an administrator is made necessary further because many checks are still being received by the firm made out to the decedent.

John Thomas Smith, counsel for Mrs. John Thomas Smith, counsel for Mrs. Latham, said that she charges that Harry Allen, a brother-in law of Mr. Latham and one of the executors, had used undue influence to procure the execution of the will, and that Charles Fraser, a partner in the firm and also an executor, refused to consider the sale of the exchange seats until a temporary administrator has been appointed.

who then arrested him.

According to Miss Murphy she saw a crowd on Canal street and in the crowd saw Mahoney and the boy.

"A great big hand was coming down on the boy," she said. "and then when the policeman released the boy he kicked him, lifting him nearly off his feet."

Miss Murphy said that she had appealed to men in the crowd to appear against the policeman, but that they declared they did not dare. Miss Murphy made a complaint at the station house and later appeared in court. Judge, Zeller listened to her complaint and suspended sentence on Cunnungham.

DELIGHTED TO DESIST. Montclair's Sole Factory Wasted Good

Steam Only to Oblige Commuters. Jersey Coated Paper Company, which conducts the only factory in the town, announced that in view of criticism because it sounds its whistle at 6 o'clock in cause it sounds its whistle at 6 o'clock in the morning it will hereafter refrain from blowing the siren at that hour.

The company, in response to those who have complained to the authorities about the noise, asserts that it has blown the early morning blasts for years merely for the benefit of commuters who desire to arise in time to catch the trains for New York between 7 and 8 o'clock. The blowing has been done at much inconvenience and the company is glad to have an excuse for discontinuing it.

The action of the paper company in silencing its 6 o'clock whistle follows the discontinuance of the ringing of the Angelus on the bells of the Immaculate Conception Church, which was given up when complaints were made of the bells awakening residents too early.

There are still a few barking dogs and crowing roosters in town.

Tells Why the Reading Got Control of Jersey Central-Price of Anthro-The full stenographic record of the testimony of George F. Baer, president of the Reading Company, in the Govern ment's suit against the coal roads was made public yesterday. Mr. Baer told of the manner in which the Jersey Central was acquired and shed some light on the economic causes makin for an increased price of anthracite coal After rehearing the importance to the Reading system of the New York barbo terminal facilities possessed by the New Jersey Central Mr. Baer said that he heard in December, 1900, that the Baltimore and Ohio had made an offer for the controlling interest of the read. He at once advised J. P. Morgan, voting trustee of the Reading Company, that it would be the ruin of the Reading property if the Baltimore and Ohio could control its terminals into New York:

Mr. Morgan and Mr. Baer had a five minutes talk with Mr. Baker, representing the Jersey Central control, and when Mr. Baker said he would take 160 for the stock Mr. Baer got the consent of a major-Mr. Baker said he would take 160 for the stock Mr. Baer got the consent of a majority of the executive committee by telephone and closed the deal orally.

Mr. Baer said that there was no combination keeping up the price of anthracite. He said that the Reading Coal and Iron's mines produced 30 per cent. of the total anthracite, but at a far higher mining cost than its competitors, so that as the total anthracite, but at a far higher mining cost than its competitors, so that as the country needed the total output of all the mines, the Reading's price naturally fixes the schedule for all producers.

Mr. Baer was asked if the companies of which he was president had entered into any combination for the restraint of trade and answered:

"I have been no party to any conspiracy or combination. My object has been to develop trade and not to restrain it."
